

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

February 28, 2010 – 9:00 a.m.

We all ask the question, “What can I do to help the environment?” We recycle, and we consume “green” products, but we know that there must be something more. Well, there is something more that you can do.... For the past twelve years, a group of volunteers have been restoring the Oceano Dunes with native plants. They’ve done a magnificent job, but now that work is being undermined by invasive ice plants, which are not native to California. The only way to fight this botanical menace is by physically pulling them out by hand. It’s hard dirty work, but it is something that needs to be done.

Many hands make light work

So we’re asking for members of our community to give up one Sunday in February to come out and add their hands and spirits to the work of restoring our dunes to their rightful splendor. Can you give us a Sunday morning? If you have any questions, please contact Riley Smith at toadyriley@yahoo.com or (805) 550-2815

When? Sunday, February 28th, from 9:am till noon.

Where? Meet at camping spot #65 in the Pismo State Beach, Oceano Campground. Located at 555 Pier Avenue in Oceano. Parking space is limited, so please carpool if possible.

What should you bring? Gloves, hat, water, and a snack

This project is qualified to count toward community service hours. Those who are working off community service hours should bring their paperwork with them to assure credit.
